

PEER SUPPORT PROGRAM

WESTERN HEALTH IS RECRUITING NOW

Presented by Caraniche at Work

After a successful launch in 2023, the Western Health Peer Support Program (PSP) is now looking to recruit nurses and midwives for the second intake to volunteer their time to provide support to colleagues. Please note we are also encouraging applications from our diverse workforce.

This program compliments other Western Health employee support services such as the Employee Assistance Program and the Critical Incident Stress Management (CISM) program and provides short term support, guidance and strategies to staff in need.

The Peer support program will provide a formal and easily accessible path-way for staff to access guidance and support from trained co-workers 24/7.

The role of a PSO is to:

- listen to the employee's experience, issues and concerns;
- work collaboratively with, and support colleagues to determine the best options for addressing their concerns;
- guide and encourage access to appropriate and professional services to ensure the right support is provided in a timely manner;
- provide confidential support.

The role of a PSO is NOT to:

- provide counselling services to a colleague;
- direct colleagues on what to do or to solve their problems (including work-related matters);
- facilitate conflict resolution or mediation;
- provide advocacy on behalf of the colleague;
- give professional advice;
- take on board other's issue or become overly involved.

Is being a Peer Supporter Officer for you?

- Are you good at relating openly and comfortably with diverse groups of people
- Do you have great listening and communication skills?
- Are people your priority and make yourself available when colleagues are in need?
- Are you good at gaining and maintaining confidentiality and trust through honesty and integrity?
- Do you have a passion for promoting and sustaining a culture of support?
- Can you adapt your approach and demeanour to match different situations?
- Can you rebound when facing difficult situations?

If this sounds like you, please submit your application via this LINK
